3 - Denver Botanic Gardens Update. Mr. Vogt reported on the activities at Denver Botanic Gardens. As of June 2, 2014, construction had been delayed due to weather. The Elipse garden would be installed next week, the new Hive Restaurant was expected to be ready the following week, and the Science Pyramid was underway with a scheduled opening in late July. If possible the opening of the Science Pyramid will coincide with the Mongolian Steppe exhibit where the DBG horticultural staff have been doing extensive research. Mr. Vogt reported that the Chihuly exhibit had arrived. Tents have been erected to store the huge number of boxes that have also filled Mitchell Hall. Fences and 24 hour security are provided for the many boxes containing over two thousand pieces of glass. The Chihuly exhibit arrived ahead of schedule, the public exhibit will open on time.

Mr. Vogt reported there are 10 concerts booked for the 12 dates published on the restricted parking stickers posted in the neighborhoods. One of the open dates might be an African American gospel concert on August 20 or 27. Mr. Vogt reported all of the concert looked "mellow" with the possible exception of The Gypsy Kings. Included in this year's lineup are Mark Cohen and Jimmy Cliff. David Gray, a hoped for performer, did not book.

For long-term consideration Mr. Vogt reported that two interior Gardens - the existing Rose Garden, and the AAS Garden are under consideration for redesign. Under consideration is a Patagonia Arroyo Garden featuring wildflowers. During the summer there will be activity related to the Science and Education Foundation's funding programs.

Mr. Vogt gave an update on the recruitment of neighborhood trustees. There are three positions. Peter Kirsch who is head of the governance committee has additional years in his appointed term. The nomination process involves submission from the community of up to 10 names per candidate position. The DBG can submit to the Mayor up to 3 candidates per opening position. Denver Botanic Gardens typically submits one candidate per opening. There are four or five candidates currently interested. Steve Lang asked about the financial requirements of Trustee service. Mr. Vogt reported that there is a 'give or get' $5000 annual requirement for board trustees. There was committee discussion. Mr. Vogt volunteered to send out a message regarding board member criteria and requirements. The NAC representatives will ask their respective organizations for candidates and resumes and forward it to Art Blomberg. Art made a motion to form a subcommittee of those volunteers for the candidate recruitment. The following NAC members volunteered to serve on the Committee: Dan Braun, Debra Adams, Svein Reichborn-Kjennerud, Victoria Eppler, & Art Blomberg.
